Almost a third of Poland's municipalities have declared themselves unwelcoming of an "LGBT ideology". While legally meaningless, the so-called "LGBT-free zones" have provided fresh ammunition to the country's ultra-conservative forces.

LGBTQIA activist Bart, 30, is among the many young people who is fighting back.

... and enshrined within the Franco-German Treaty of Aachen of 2019 in chapter 3, article 9:

The two countries acknowledge the decisive role played by culture and the media in strengthening the Franco-German friendship. They are therefore determined to create a common space of freedom and opportunity for their peoples, as well as a common cultural and media space. They shall expand mobility and exchange programmes between their countries, especially for young people within the framework of the Franco-German Youth Office, and set quantifiable targets in these areas. In order to promote ever closer relations in all fields of cultural expression, including through integrated cultural institutes, they shall set up specific programmes and a digital platform, geared to young people in particular.
